

Parsons Provides Specialized Support to Insider Threat Mission

February 22, 2021

CENTERVILLE, Va., Feb. 22, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- Parsons Corporation (NYSE: PSN) has been awarded a task order by the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency (NGA) on the MOJAVE Functional Area 2 (FA2) indefinite-delivery indefinite-quantity (IDIQ) contract. This award is the seventh task order Parsons has won on the MOJAVE FA2 contract since 2017, totaling more than $200 million.

"We are excited to continue our partnership with NGA and its insider threat program," said Laurie Ternes, senior vice president of Parsons' threat intelligence directorate. "We appreciate NGA's confidence in our ability to apply our knowledge, insight, and Scaled Agile Framework approach and deliver innovative solutions which mitigate the threats they face."

The recompete contract from NGA has a six-month base with two option years and will continue providing security and engineering to the larger NGA mission as they seek to strengthen the nation's counter insider threat mission. The MOJAVE FA2 contract provides a variety of security operations support including polygraph support, security specialist support, clinical psychology, counterintelligence support and insider threat analysis to assist NGA in executing their mission to the fullest.

Parsons has supported the NGA insider threat program since 2012, helping to implement large-scale analytics that automate the review of big data. The delivered technology and analytic solutions drive efficiencies that enable NGA to increase the volume of data being reviewed while reducing the time it takes to detect patterns of activity indicative of an insider threat. Parsons' insider threat services have advanced NGA's insider threat program and helped NGA to achieve multiple awards from the National Counterintelligence and Security Center.
